Mrs. W. S. Jarvis, Teacher, Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7:30.

Daniel Curry was a mighty man of God in the middle West. In a dream he ascended after death and knocked at the gate of Heaven.

When asked for his name, he was told it could not be found, but if he wished, he might appear before the Judgment Seat and answer for himself. He then found himself rapidly borne away until he came into the presence of a mighty shining light, into the very midst of which he was ushered. Out of the light came a voice saying, "Have you always been good?"

Alas, he had not. "Have you always been pure?" He could not affirm it. He was condemned by his own testimony. As he stood there, he heard a voice sweeter than any mother's voice and saw a face sweeter than any mother's face. That voice of unspeakable sweetness said, "Father, all this man's sins, all of his failures and all of his shortcomings, put all that down against me. Daniel Curry stood for me down on the earth, and I'll stand for him up here."

Watching Life of Plants.

From fuller information, now at hand in regard to the machine by aid of which the Indian scientist, Sir J. C. Bose, has been making visible to London the ingrowth of plants, shows that he does much more than make visible what everybody already knew—that plants increase in size. He also has revealed that the growth of a plant is by no means steady or continuous—that it is affected by many of the influences besides mere nutriment that affect the growth of animals. In short, this machine, which is called a crescograph and magnifies movement a million times, proves that plants are much more alive than it is customary to credit them with being, and it is not an altogether fanciful notion that when the facts in relation to plant life become better known, something of consideration for their "feelings" and something of compunction about treating them cruelly may develop.

Rather Embarrassing.

We had just moved into a new house. I was dressing when the bell rang, and mother went to the door. Sure enough it was the young man I was trying to avoid. But instead of saying I was not at home, mother said: "Oh, let me show you our new house." Everything was lovely until approaching the closet, where I was crouched down on my knees, half dressed, mother said: "This is where we keep all our old junk and rubbish," and opened the door.

I shall never forget how embarrassed I was.—Exchange.

His Version.

The seventh grade children were discussing the ways to bring down the cost of clothing. The teacher had told them about Irvin Cobb's desire to have trousers abbreviated into knickerbockers or "pants" as Irvin termed it. They all agreed that this would certainly be a saving of material and then little Jacob suggested a further abbreviation. "You might leave out of them most of the pockets," he said. "There ain't nothing to carry in them now since the country's gone dry."—Indianapolis News.

OAKLAND SENSIBLE SIX

THE steadily growing popularity of the Oakland Sensible Six among American farmers, is due, primarily, to the capacity of this well-made car for continuous and economical service. Even in those districts where roads are unimproved and garage facilities are few and far between, the Oakland keeps to its work day after day and month after month, quietly, competently, uninterruptedly. It is a comfortable car, exceedingly roomy and easy-riding; and because of its high ratio of power to weight, its action is brisk and responsive. Only immense manufacturing resources, and a production of unusual magnitude, make possible the very moderate price at which it is sold.
